BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Inkaterra Machu Picchu Pueblo Hotel, a select boutique nature hotel considered “The Garden of Eden” by Condé Nast Traveler, lets you experience life at an exclusive royal Inca retreat for your stay. You will visit the ancient Machu Picchu Citadel in company of a certified English-speaking Inkaterra Explorer Guide. You also may enjoy the benefits of a de-stress massage at our mystical UNU Spa, and you will have the opportunity to participate in group excursions, such as bird watching or an orchid walk, offered on our 12-acre grounds. Meals included in your Inkaterra dining package will be served in a glass-walled restaurant, offering stunning views of the rushing Vilcanota River and the green Andes Mountains.

Inkaterra Machu Picchu Pueblo Hotel occupies a private five-hectare (12.3-acre) mountainside reserve, located at the foot of Machu Picchu Mountain, near the Aguas Calientes railroad station. With the look and feel of a rustic Andean Village, this welcoming retreat offers travelers an authentic travel experience, in an atmosphere of refinement and thoughtful hospitality. The spectacular grounds are laced with paths that wind past waterfalls and gardens; trails wander through wild forest. This is a place to relax, while exploring nature and encountering the wonders of the Inca civilization, feeling an authentic travel in an atmosphere of refinement, caring, and warm hospitality.

Skilled artisans built the 85-room boutique hotel, using stone, adobe, stucco, and eucalyptus beams to create a lovely Andean Village ambience. Travelers follow stone pathways to their rooms, located in comfortable one- or two-story whitewashed cottages. Andean artifacts and textiles decorate the bar, boutique, and reception building; the dining room displays scores of pre-Columbian relics. Charming features abound; among them are an inviting reading room, a lounge with crackling fireplaces, and the Andean sauna—an igloo made from indigenous bamboo and fresh eucalyptus leaves.

The hotel grounds include more than 5 km. (3.12 miles) of ecological trails, and several spots of observation and contemplation of flora (including 372 native orchid species), birds (207 species), and butterflies (111 species), amongst a diversity of natural wonder.

MACHU PICCHU INFORMATION

"Machu Picchu was... the favored country retreat for the royal family and Inca nobility." - The New York Times.

OVERVIEW

Machu Picchu Historical Reserve is a magical place that fascinates through its vast archaeological remains, geological formations, unique flora and fauna, and spectacular cloud forest. The most remarkable part of the Reserve is the archaeological site of Machu Picchu, one of the world's greatest sites.

The Incas built this citadel at the end of the fourteenth century. As centuries passed, the fortress became totally overgrown by vegetation, and virtually disappeared from sight. Hiram Bingham, Director of the Yale Peruvian Expedition, rediscovered Machu Picchu in 1911. Since then, it has become known as one of the Wonders of the World.

Recent research compiled by Yale University has revealed that the Machu Picchu Citadel was not, as Hiram Bingham believed, the traditional birthplace of the Inca people, nor was it the final stronghold of the Incas in their losing struggle against the Spanish. Instead, Machu Picchu, built by Pachacutec at the peak of the empire, was a favored retreat for the Inca nobility.

Machu Picchu Historical Reserve is located above the town of Machu Picchu Pueblo (formerly known as Aguas Calientes) at 2,450 meters (8,038 ft.) a.s.l. The site covers an area of 32,592 hectares (80,535 acres).

LOCATION

The Machu Picchu Historical Reserve is located in a cloud forest between the Andes and the Amazon Basin, 112 km (70 miles) from the City of Cusco, in a green canyon on the Urubamba River.

ACCESS FROM CUSCO

By Train

Several trains depart daily from Poroy-Cusco and Ollantaytambo to Machu Picchu, from 6:00 a.m.

Schedules and the duration of the journey vary depending on the train station selected (3.5 hours from Cusco and 1.5 hours from Ollantaytambo). Round-trip costs range from US $100.00 to more than USD$700.00 per person, depending on the choice of service.

Trekking

Scheduled three to five-day treks on the Inca Trail require previous arrangements and advanced booking, due to limited quotas. Most treks start from km. 88, Qorihuayrachina, at 2,600 meters (8,530 feet) above sea level. More than 15 daily flights connect Lima to Cusco (approximately 1-hour flight).

The Inca Trail is closed during the month of February due to maintenance.

WEATHER

Machu Picchu enjoys a subtropical highland climate - warm and humid during the day and cold at night, with temperatures varying between 8°C (47°F) and 22°C (72°F). Humidity ranges between 77% and 91%, and annual rainfall is 400-1000 mm (16-39 inches). Dry season is from May to October, and the orchid season is from November to April.

FLORA & FAUNA OF THE REGION

Machu Picchu's natural exuberance is characteristic of the Andean Cloud Forest — a land of vibrant orchids, exotic bromeliads, colorful butterflies, and several species of indigenous birds, such as the Inca Roacher (Thryothorus eisenmanni), Parodi Hemispingus (Hemispingus parodi), and Green and White Hummingbird (Leucippus viridicauda).

Several kinds of hummingbirds, monkeys, and various endangered species such as the Peruvian Cock-of-the-Rock (Rupicola peruviana), the Andean Spectacled Bear (Tremarctos omatos), River Otter (Lontra longicaudis), and the Mountain Lion (Felis concolor) are also seen in the Machu Picchu Historical Reserve.

CARBON NEUTRAL HOTEL

At Inkaterra, we strongly believe that we all need to change our behaviors as individuals, as countries and as a global community. We all contribute to global warming; thus, everyone needs to be part of the solution. Since 1975, based on a principle of respect for the ecosystem, Inkaterra has been developing conservation programs to preserve the natural characteristics of the Amazon rainforest, which helps prevent global warming.

Inkaterra protects more than 17,000 hectares of original forest, helping to reduce directly 3,315,000 tons of carbon. This measurement was initiated in 1989 by England University of Leeds and Institute for Earth and Biosphere, professor-specialists Dr. Oliver Philips and Dr. Timothy R. Baker at the Inkaterra Reserva Amazónica, the first site in Peru where carbon fixes were measured. Furthermore, Inkaterra support a variety of external conservation programs through its NGO Inkaterra Asociación – ITA.

With these programs, Inkaterra has become a truly Carbon-Neutral organization, and every traveler at Inkaterra has a 100% Carbon Neutral hotel stay.

Inkaterra is setting a precedent as one of the leading and most influential tourism companies in Peru taking the lead in sustainability and the fight against global warming.
