Inkaterra La Casona Receives Andrew Harpers Prestigious Recommendation

- December 7, 2010

Andrew Harper's Hideaway Report, the most respected publication in luxury travel, announced its editor's recommendation of Inkaterra La Casona in Cusco, Peru, in its November 2010 issue.

Known in the industry for his incognito travels and spot-on reviews, Mr. Harper traveled to Peru earlier this year and inconspicuously visited some of the country's new hospitality offerings and other established accommodations and sites.

Among the places he visited is Peru's only Relais & Chateaux property, Inkaterra La Casona. The restored 11-suite hotel -- formerly a 16th-century Spanish colonial manor house -- has played an important role in revitalizing Cusco's hospitality scene and Mr. Harper especially noted its "attractive young staff...and sophisticated and exceptionally comfortable accommodations."

All of Andrew Harper's recommended properties possess exceptional character, a commitment to classic hospitality and a profound sense of place. Mr. Harper does not evaluate hotels by means of a checklist, but uses his three decades of experience to distinguish the truly enchanting from the merely excellent. Inkaterra La Casona is delighted to be among the best of the best properties worldwide to receive his recommendation.
