Unique Stays: Rainforest Lodges

Hidden in lush, dewy jungles with emerald vistas, these seven rainforest lodges provide the ultimate getaway among the trees.

Located near the Tambopata National Reserve in the Amazon's Madre de Dios region are 35 thatched-roof cabanas on stilts scattered around the property. Fusing elegance with eco-design, the lantern-lit rooms are outfitted with hammocks, organic bath products and beds wrapped in crisp white linens. Set 27 metres above the forest floor, with excellent views of the animals below, is the Canopy Tree House, a bar-cum-watchtower that serves cocktails. (Bartender Ysmael makes a potent champagne and pisco sour.) Spa treatments and twilight boat tours through the flooded marshland brimming with amphibians, mammals and flora complete the experience.
