Into the wild: The incredible new properties added to National Geographic's Unique Lodges Of The World (including one where polar bears join you for breakfast)

- Since its launch last year, the amount of properties in the collection has nearly doubled in size - from 24 to 45
- Over the last few months there have been seven new additions including offerings in the Seychelles and Canada
- One of the newcomers is China's Banyan Tree Ringha, located in a secluded valley near fabled Shangri-La
