INKATERRA LA CASONA; CUSCO, PERU

The Inkaterra La Casona is a 16th-century colonial mansion-turned-hotel, surrounded by cobblestoned streets and located in the heart of Cusco, Peru. It sits on the former training grounds of the Inca army and once housed guests such as Spanish Conquistador Diego de Almagro and "Libertor" Simón Bolívar.

Today, the hotel has been completely restored, but still has signs of its original architecture. Travelers can choose to stay in cabanas or pavilions with a complimentary breakfast made with local ingredients. There is also a research room where guests can study the local flora and fauna.
