Inkaterra Reserva Amazónica: Puerto Maldonado, Peru

A resort nestled deep in the Peruvian Amazon, Inkaterra Reserva Amazónica is home to one treehouse, which you can only reach from the property's Canopy Walkway. The Walkway itself is a marvel, measuring more than 1,000 feet long. It sits 73 feet above the forest floor, as does the treehouse. While you can visit the treehouse to spot wildlife and enjoy a drink or dinner, the staff can also transform it into a room for the night with two beds, a portable toilet and binoculars. Additionally, guests who stay overnight receive personal guide, butler and driver services.
