One of South America's distinguished sites is now home to a new spa. Peru's Sacred Valley of the Incas is the site of the region's new Inkaterra organic spa at an award-winning resort. The new spa is inspired by the nearby Urubamba river and traditional Andean architecture.

The spa is the newest addition to the Inkaterra Hacienda Urubamba and features a plunge pool, four private therapy rooms and a dry sauna for a soothing and spiritual experience in the mountains. Everything the spa and wellness center uses is sourced locally on the property of the resort.

The wellness center offers services, including an array of massage therapies, Andean stone therapy and reflexology.

The Inkaterra Hacienda Urubamba is a contemporary hotel between Cusco and Machu Picchu. Inkaterra itself is an organization with more than 40 years of sustainable travel experience.

The new wellness center will allow guests of the hotel to rejuvenate their bodies and minds while away in the Peruvian mountains.
