Catch 40 Winks in a Luxe Mountain Lodge

Winded by your exertions in Machu Picchu? There's no better place to recover than the Inkaterra Hacienda Urubamba. This stunning mountain lodge is a welcome slice of five-star luxury in the city of Urubamba, capital of the Sacred Valley, located halfway between Machu Picchu and Cusco. After a deep, restful sleep in your own detached lodge (known as a "casita"), you'll wake up to the crowing of a rooster, and throw open the drapes to kick off your day with an inspiring view of the soaring Andes. Sustainability is the name of the game on the hotel's sprawling 100 acre-property, with organic, carbon-free crops harvested for use in the superb on-site restaurant, and birdwatching tours offered as part of the daily programming.
