While people are quarantined by the COVID 19 pandemic and things are getting quieter around us, it seems that wild animals around the world are exploring ecosystems they once inhabited.

All over the world, there are examples of how the coronavirus crisis is changing the rhythm of human life as fauna is rearranging itself.

In the pueblo of Machu Picchu (Aguas Calientes), more activity of birds, mammals, reptiles, insects and other animals is observed, which are exploring the pueblo and coming down the mountain with more tranquility.

The Inkaterra Machu Picchu Pueblo Hotel, located in a well-preserved cloud forest, now has a larger population of wildlife: birds, butterflies, mammals and reptiles. They now come near the hotel where they are protected by trees.
