NEWSROOM

Inkaterra Reserva Amazonica, located in the Peruvian Amazon, is now offering guests the opportunity to take a jungle excursion at night. Guests can observe nocturnal animals on a canopy walk at a height of 28 meters (92 feet).

It's as different as day and night, so they say. And being in the middle of the rainforest makes it all the more true. While the parrots are silent and the squirrel monkeys are asleep, others are out hunting...together with Inkaterra's professional jungle guides, guests can now book "Canopy at Night!"

The tour begins at the Canopy Interpretation Center, where visitors receive a short lecture on the (nocturnal) flora and fauna of the Amazon. A highlight of the tour is the view of the starry sky from one of the 30-meter-high (98,4-foot-high) towers. The sky here is clearer than city dwellers have ever seen!

Bookable now: for all guests of Inkaterra Reserva Amazonica, Inkaterra Hacienda Concepción and Inkaterra Amazonas Fieldstation.
