Guides. Safety. Logistics. Yeah, suddenly, the dream feels a lot more complicated, but what most people don't realize is that Peru is best explored with a travel agency.

This way, you take so much weight off your shoulders, and on top of that, you get a ton of benefits. A great agency doesn't just book your hotel or train ticket. They help make your entire trip smooth and even fun from the start.

In this guide, I'm going to share some of the best travel agencies in Peru.

Top Peru Travel Agencies to Consider

There are so many options when it comes to tours and travel agencies for Peru that it can be overwhelming planning a trip, but here is a selection of the most trusted names, each with a different strength depending on your travel style.

Guruexplorers

An agency that has been gaining a lot of attention for several years now, thanks to its unique approach. They make each trip feel personal by focusing on tailored experiences that are based on what you actually want to see and do. Instead of filling the trip with standard activities and itineraries, they work with you and plan with you to build something that fits your style, pace, and budget.

Those traits are often what place them high on top, but what truly sets Guruexplorers apart is their local knowledge. They actually understand Peru from start to finish, and beyond the tourist highlights. Yes, they can take you to Machu Picchu, but they can also arrange visits to lesser-known villages, local markets, and hidden viewpoints.

Not only that, other travelers have said that they are also good at combining adventure with comfort, because, yes, to have a good adventure, you don't need to sacrifice comfort.

Alpaca Expeditions

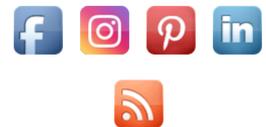

The Inca Trail is something that many travelers look up to, and if you're one of those travelers, then there's no better travel agency than Alpaca Expeditions for that. First, they are based in Cusco, and second, their main focus is on trekking tours, especially the routes to Machu Picchu.

I blog openly about being a busy Mum who is passionate about our environment sharing our lifestyle and the steps we take to be more eco-friendly. I love to help others and a lot of my blog posts, social media posts, Instastories reflect that on a daily basis.

because, when you're hiking at high altitude, that support can make a big difference.

On the other hand, if you have already experienced the Inca Trail, don't worry, Alpaca Expeditions offers different routes like the Salkantay Trek and even shorter options for those who don't want a multi-day hike.

Peru For Less

Now, I know that not everyone wants to share a bus with a ton of other travelers... many of us value privacy, and adding that private touch to a trip to Peru is possible. Peru for Less focuses on that upscale side of traveling, specializing on custom and tailor-made itineraries with a higher level of comfort.

They design the entire experience around you in a more concierge-style travel to include private guides, boutique hotels, and unique experiences like cooking classes or private city tours.

Not only that, but their team also helps with domestic flights, transfers, and any other special requests. That level of planning can give you peace of mind, especially if it's your first time in South America.

Inkaterra

If you're looking for an ecotourism experience in Peru, or if your priorities are sustainability and nature, then this one is for you. Inkaterra is probably the least known option on this list, and is mainly known as a hotel brand popular for its eco-lodges rather than as a travel company, but they can easily plan a trip with you.

It's one of the pioneers of ecotourism in the country since 1975, and they offer experiences connected to their properties in places like the Sacred Valley and the Amazon rainforest. You can stay in a jungle lodge surrounded by wildlife, then go on guided walks to learn about plants and animals.

The Inkaterra team focuses on conservation and local culture. Their trips often include expert naturalist guides who help you understand what you're seeing. This option works well for travelers who want comfort but also want to connect deeply with Peru's natural beauty.

Intrepid runs tours all over the world, including Peru. Their Peru itineraries often include Lima, Cusco, the Sacred Valley, and Machu Picchu. Some triss also include Lake Titicaca or the Amazon; however, what sets them apart is their focus on small groups and responsible travel. They also mix guided activities with free time. This way, you have structure without feeling rushed every minute of the day.

Conclusion

Visiting Peru is one of those experiences that you MUST DO at least one time in your lifetime, especially now that you know you don't have to carry all of the planning alone. Most of those agencies do the heavy lifting for you; this way, you can have a smooth trip. Whether you're trekking the Inca Trail, exploring the Amazon, or trying food in Lima, choosing a knowledgeable and trustworthy agency makes your experience not just organized but unforgettable.
