Location: Cabo Blanco, Peru

Expected launch: Q2

Inkaterra has been earning plaudits for its resource-aware luxury lodges in Peru for more than 50 years. Each hotel adjoins a living field laboratory, which works on research and conservation programs, known as Inkaterra Asociación. It's expanding beyond its typical, internationally known locations such as Machu Picchu and Cusco to open a lodge on the northern Cabo Blanco coastline. Anglers—including Ernest Hemingway, who came to film The Old Man and the Sea here—have long come to land mega-marlins off this coast. American philanthropist Alfred Glassell Jr. caught a 1,560-pound black marlin from the ship Miss Texas here in 1953, a record that remains unbroken. There will be 20 rooms and suites, each with private plunge pools and terraces. Doubles from $550.
