The intimate Inkaterra Cabo Blanco beach resort on Peru's northern coast is the fifth property of the owner-managed Peruvian hotel group, Inkaterra, to join the Green Pearls® network. This architectural gem is not only engaged in marine conservation but also offers guests access to the culture and (eventful) history of the fishing village.

For over 50 years, Inkaterra has been dedicated to promoting a more gentle and sustainable tourism in Peru. The company initiates and supports nature conservation projects in various regions of the country and ensures a close connection to the local area in the design of its hotels. Inkaterra Cabo Blanco blends seamlessly into the coastal landscape. Natural and local materials were prioritized during construction. The design features natural stone, wood, and glass to connect the interior and exterior.

Between relaxation and commitment

The Inkaterra Cabo Blanco focuses on tranquility and a mindful experience of nature. In its current pre-opening phase, the resort has 13 spacious suites with private terraces, plunge pools, and direct ocean views. Protecting marine ecosystems is also central to the Cabo Blanco concept: a private marine reserve is located directly off the coast. Through the Inkaterra Asociación, Inkaterra supports the “Ocean Forest” project, which includes research and conservation measures for sea turtles, as well as the promotion of sustainable fishing methods. Inkaterra also collaborates with a local women's initiative that produces jewelry from mother-of-pearl.

To underscore cultural and natural virtues, we work under a holistic approach that generates added value, especially in rural areas.
